A2iA Named Among the 100 Companies that Matter in Knowledge Management for 2008

A2iA customers advocate for A2iA's inclusion on this year's list because of its ability to solve complex business problems.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25, 2008 – A2iA, a leading provider of tools for document analysis and handwritten data extraction, announced today that KMWorld has named A2iA among the 100 Companies that Matter in Knowledge Management for 2008. KM practitioners, theorists, analysts, vendors and their customers and colleagues determine the yearly list to recognize innovation and excellence in the industry.

“I was contacted directly by A2iA customers, each advocating for A2iA’s inclusion on this year’s list, and explaining the breadth of A2iA’s legitimate solutions to vexing business problems,” said Hugh McKellar, Editor-in-Chief of KMWorld Magazine. “This list is designed to recognize organizations leading the way in the knowledge economy. All companies included share the following criteria: Each has helped to create a market, redefine one or enhance one, and all of them demonstrate the capacity for customer-driven agile innovation.”

According to KMWorld, companies that receive this prestigious distinction are those that best contribute to the better management of the intellectual property of an enterprise, and their position as leaders of innovation and competitive growth.

“A2iA is proud that its recognition and document classification engines have been recognized as market leaders,” said Jean-Louis Fages, A2iA’s Chairman of the Board and CEO. “A2iA continues to prove its ability to help knowledge management systems understand a document’s meaning, and then extract both handwritten and machine-printed information from them.”
