KMWorld Recognizes A2iA Among 100 Companies that Matter in Knowledge Management for the Sixth Year

A2iA recognized for its development of software tools that streamline complex document workflows and deliver access to all types of printed and cursive handwritten data.

New York, February 25, 2014 – A2iA (@A2iA), the industry's leading developer of specialized software tools that help users optimize their data capture, document processing and workflow automation capabilities, announced its inclusion among KMWorld's 2014 list of 100 Companies that Matter in Knowledge Management. This marks the sixth year that A2iA has been recognized by KMWorld for helping organizations achieve business intelligence by automating the capture and routing of complex, handwritten, and unstructured data, and allowing it to become searchable and reportable.

"The Global knowledge management market is always evolving, and A2iA continues to develop innovative tools and products that address users' needs," said Hugh McKellar, KMWorld Editor-in-Chief. "Each year the included companies are voted on by KM practitioners, theorists, analysts, vendors and their customers and colleagues, who recognize technologies which impact this space based on real world requirements."

In addition to A2iA's server-based data extraction and automatic document classification software, the company most recently released capabilities that reside client-side on a mobile phone or tablet, allowing for offline image analysis and data recognition. Expanding the company's Global reach within the knowledge management space, A2iA's product-suite now allows for the inclusion of check and document images captured by a mobile device to be processed automatically and to be included in the workflow.
